BUT WHY DO YOU HAVE TO STOOP SO LOW?
I KNOW HOW MUCH YOU WANT TO DEFEAT ME, YOUR NEMESIS-
I never even thought of...
Hey

Is that maron any good?
What all that means is we don't get to see Teikaku fight today.

We of the First Judo encountered Teikoku Judo at the last school tournament
And I've only sparred with him that one time so far
Oh?
Yes he is
Is he so good that even Iga shushou can't be sure of beating him?
It was pure luck that I wan with the Ippan Seainage

Suzuko Kyutei

Those who bother to read the cast intro will notice a new character coming up in volume 11. Suzuko Kyutei, the shushou of the TLW will be making an appearance any day now (haha) poor girl. Anyway, her name comes from "Cutey Suzuki" a former female Japanese pro-wrestler who went into the seiyu business too apparently.

I was going to say something about the delay between Vol 10 and 11 but hey, I'm out of space!

"Proper Wrestling"?

Wrestling as seen on TV isn't really considered a proper form of wrestling. That's more of a rigged mass entertainment thing. What you see at the Olympics is known variously as Greek, Hellenic, or Orthodox wrestling. Two wrestlers get in a ring and wrestle each other until one side gives up or both shoulders touch the mat.

The Long Absence

I was busy doing other stuff. Like taking a development course, getting my internet connection set up, and generally catching up on manga and pop culture, all of this in Taiwan. Editing SKM is very time consuming so that got put on the back burner.

Coming up...

Well, it was a nine month wait (at least) but coming up is one of the most - and I mean, most - exciting scenes in the entire SKM series. Probably second only to Kumi and Kotaro's little double act in a Shinjuku park.

Stay tuned!

The sad thing is that at the original rate of editing, SKM could have been finished by now... even more depressingly, Puui only did like 4 volumes in that time. Hehehe.

RKC

Weird, nine month wait...? Never mind, it must be a coincidence.

Whenever someone falls over Fuji G will show up with his camera. Apparently he used to be known as the "Bloodhound of Kodansha".

Clam, Rosebud and the Cherry

The actual literal translation was "abalone" for clam "chrysanthemum" (peonies) for rosebud while cherry I have left as is. I decided to use the more common English/American term in the first two cases

Cherries grow on cherry trees, known commonly to anime/manga fans as "Sakura". Abalone can be eaten either as sushi, grilled, or while the Chrysanthemum is traditionally the flower of the Japanese Imperial family

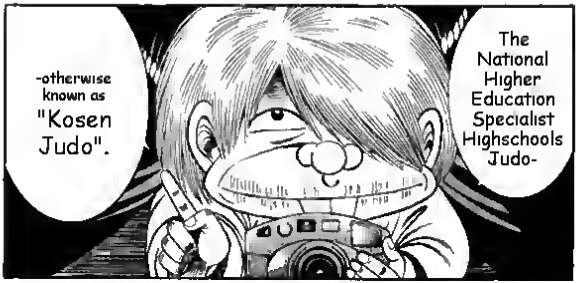
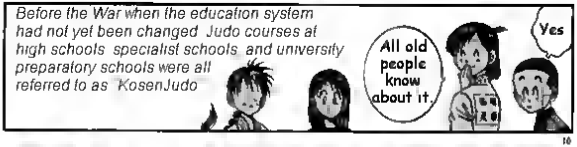
Mecha Ju-kun's "Kosen" can paralyze an enemy for approximately thirty seconds!
EAT THIS!
ACK KAH GAH
You know what that is, Kataro?
..So that's it... now I get it!
Which stands for-
Erh, it's not the ray of light "kosen" but "kosen" as in specialist high-
高専
Is that so--?
-So you can never defeat him at newaza!
So how do you do this "Kosen" thing?
How rude!
Hey!

The two Kanji characters from the top are "High" and "Specialized"



-otherwise known as "Kosen Judo".
The National Higher Education Specialist Highschools Judo-



Before the War when the education system had not yet been changed Judo courses at high schools specialist schools and university preparatory schools were all referred to as KosenJudo
All old people know about it.
Yes

That is- it became a Judo that focused on newaza!
As a result, Kosen Judo began to evolve in a different direction, and took on a flavor quite distinct from other forms of Judo
Starting from the third year of the Taisho Era, the Imperial University at Kyoto began holding a national tournament for specialist highs

You had to study hard to get into these schools so teams would've been made up of mostly new students whose fitness had suffered
As a result it was unlikely for these teams to be made up of Judo experts or particularly strong students!
How to turn these students into a master of Judo in their few short years at the school-
Aren't you done yet?
Of course!
All the students who entered the tournament wanted to win honor for their school
But the tournament was for team entries only and all the competitors were students as well-

Focusing on newaza was the answer!
Not only was newaza easier to learn than tachi-waza-
and less affected by differences in physique-
It was also more unlikely that either side would score a win by sheer luck!

Kosen Judo even almost replaced the Kodokan as the main style of Judo!
In the end!
Stimulated by the students' creativity, all kinds af new techniques began ta appear-
Sensei, I give up, uncle!
I can't afford to lose.
Mae Sankaku Jime Using the legs to pin the opponent by the head and an arm
Mae Sankaku Jime — Frontal Triangular Choke
It is believed that the Juda clubs af the seven natianal Imperial Universities have inherited the spirit af Kasen Juda
Then that
But it did nat disappear completely!
After the War the educatian system was refarmed and Kasen Juda became less papular.
12
Not at all!
Daes that mean ance I have mastered Kasen Juda-
I won't be easy meat to that pervert, right?
Eh?

I advise you to give up now and avoid a direct showdown with her!
Cramming those kinds of tricks won't work on Tachine!

Koaen Judo

Before the war Japan had three types of tertiary education institutions which were know collectively as "Kosen" (Special Highs) Since the students at these schools were usually social or intellectual elites Kosen Judo soon gained prominence and at one point threatened to become mainstream Judo This was not what Judo s founder Jigoro Kano wanted so in 1925 the Kodokan (not the Kodansha my mistake!) ordered the tournament rules revised The revision allowed the competitors to use newaza only when they had ended up on the mat after a tachiwaza move was executed (or a failed attempt)

An exemption was given to the "Seven Universities Tournament" since Kano recognized that Kosen Judo had an important role to play in furthering the development of newaza This tournament continues under the "old rules" today Those Judoka who specialize in the Kosen style are considered to be an elite within Judo since even today they would rather pass out from a choke hold than signal their surrender

It s amazing how Japan comes up these things The traditional passport photo booth has mutated into something which allows you (and your friends) to get your pictures taken together and made into these small stamp sized stickers which can be stuck on anything - mobile phones pencial cases books

These machines can add special borders and frames and photo sticker machines located at popular tourist locations will often have an appropriate theme and back ground Love Hina s Keitaro collected these things (Since it is usually used for group photos it showed how much of a loser he was collecting photo stickers of himself alone!)

Ask any asian girl you know to show you one
